DISCUSSION:

Background & Property Description

The property located at 290 Heritage Court is a single-story residential structure located in the northeast quadrant of the City, north of the Lincoln Park Historic District, and south of the 10 Freeway. The surrounding area is predominantly residential properties developed between the 1900s-1950s in varying conditions.

According to Pomona Building & Safety Division permit history, the property remained vacant and undeveloped until November of 1993 when the property's foundation was laid, suggesting that the structure was relocated to Pomona some time in 1993 or 1994. Public news articles detail that the residential structure estimated to have originally been constructed in 1912, was relocated from Harvey Mudd College in Claremont for campus expansion purposes, and previously served as housing for college staff.

The property is one of three properties on Heritage Court, a private drive that was developed in the 1990s to serve as an area for the relocation of older homes in danger of demolition. The concept for Heritage Court was the idea of Architect John Kasperowicz. Kasperowicz is widely regarded as an architect and creative director for the conceptualization and implementation of theme parks including EPCOT, Tokyo Disneyland, Disneyland Paris, Legoland, and Knott's Berry Farm. While the original vision was to create a neighborhood of five relocated restored homes, the project was not a financial success and the project was foreclosed upon before the City of Pomona acquired the project. Today, Heritage Court is comprised of three relocated homes from Pomona and Claremont.

The subject structure is the first home located at the entrance of Heritage Court. Unlike the surrounding development of the area, the structure is not oriented to the public right-of-way (Gibbs Street) and is only accessible via a private drive along Heritage Court. The structure has a setback of approximately of 13-feet, differing from the neighborhood streetscape which is characterized by a 25-foot setback.

Designation Criteria

Pursuant to Pomona Zoning & Development Code Section 800.C.2.a., any Eligible Historical Resource may be designated a Historic Landmark by the City Council if it meets the criteria for listing in the National Register of Historic Places, the California Register of Historical Resources, or the City of Pomona Historic Landmark Designation Criteria.

While the structure is estimated to have been constructed in 1912 in Claremont, CA and relocated to Pomona in 1993, the property contains distinctive characteristics of a 1910s Craftsman Bungalow. Craftsman Bungalows began to make their appearance in architecture in the early 1900s and are noted as an indigenous California version of the American Arts and Crafts movement, incorporating Southern California's unique qualities. The property exemplifies the Craftsman Bungalow architectural style and is characterized by its earth-toned paint colors, large roof overhangs, rafters, wide front door, wide front porch with heavy porch piers, river rock foundation, and uniquely features the distinct exterior wood shingle siding meeting City of Pomona Historic Landmark Designation Criteria No. 1:

- 1. It embodies distinctive characteristics of a style, type, period, or method of construction, or is a valuable example of the use of indigenous materials or craftsmanship*
