

CRAFTSMAN

1911

The expansive diagonal placement of this large Craftsman adds to its elegant stature. The wide clapboards, multi-paned double-hung window, second floor planters, and two-story rectangular shape all contribute to the Colonial character of this house. The main roof is a single, low-pitched transverse gable while the wide front porch has a similar front-facing gable. The prominent front porch is Oriental in flavor with a wide bargeboard and heavy, angular, triple porch posts and railings. The heavy eaves support brackets add to this influence. A pergola on the right side is covered with wisteria, and is typical of the Craftsman period, an era which featured outdoor living and lush plantings. The original placement of the pergola was in front of the home.
