

COLONIAL REVIVAL

1907

This 1907 Colonial Revival home has a high stone foundation, small central dormer, flared roof line and wooden porch columns. The front of the home is highlighted by two windows which have leaded glass. It is an embellished National Folk plan structure.

Another interesting features of this home is a 3x3 decorative tile mosaic announcing its street number "245" in muted pinks and greens. From its age and design appearance, it appears to have been original and constructed when the house was built.

The home's original owners were George F. Robinson, a retired army officer, and his wife, R. Aurora Robinson, who lived here in 1907.
